BY LAUREEN SWEENEY

The exact positioning of new pedestrian crossing lights on St. Catherine near the arena appears headed for review by city council, the Independent learned at press time.

While initial work has been completed just east of Bethune, utilities commissioner Patrick Martin said he had asked for re-assessment based on safety and practicality.

The same concerns have been voiced by one nearby resident who has been asking council to hold off until completion of a professional traffic analysis and approval of the new arena.

"It's putting the cart before the horse," said Gary Ikeman who has been voicing his concerns at council meetings, and in corre-

WMA calls for arena consultation

BY LAUREEN SWEENEY

The Westmount Municipal Association (WMA) has called on city council to inject a public consultation process into its information rollout and random telephone poll on the arena/pool renewal project. The plans are to be unveiled April 6.

In a letter distributed to the mayor and council at the mid-month meeting March 18, the watchdog organization also asks for citizens to have more time to consider the design. A scheduled two-week information period includes the Easter and Passover holidays when many go away.

"We feel that citizens must be able to give feedback," WMA board member Patricia Dumais told the Independent in presenting the letter.

Asked to comment on the letter the next day, Mayor Karin Marks said the proposed schedule may be delayed because "there's a possibility we won't be ready." But, she added, the project must push forward quickly to be ready to take advantage of infrastructure grants. (For city councillor Patrick Martin's view, see p. 4.)

The WMA was concerned that so little is still known about the plan after the initial Phase 1 period of the design process, Dumais said. "We understood that citizens would be informed all along the way. Some people feel that a report by the mayor after Phase 1 was insufficient." Council is also known to be divided on the issue.

The letter asks for citizens to have "an opportunity to voice their opinions" at already scheduled information-only sessions.

It states that the telephone poll should "solicit citizens' input on the scope and scale of the proposed plan as opposed to a 'go/no-go' response."

It also asks for more time between the public information meetings (April 18 and 21) and the random poll of some 800 residents set for between April 22 and 29 (see the Independent, March 10, p. 1 for more details).

The letter stems from a WMA resolution proposed by Stanley Baker and adopted by the board at its meeting March 16.

WHA hears from parent WMA

At the Westmount Historical Association meeting on March 19, city councillors Kathleen Duncan and Tom Thompson compared notes. Both are former presidents of the Westmount Municipal Association.

BY LAUREEN SWEENEY

Two city councillors returned to their roots as former presidents of the Westmount Municipal Association (WMA) March 19 to describe the key role the organization has played in shaping the community from the other side of the council

Addressing a full house of some 40 people at a meeting of the Westmount Historical Association (WHA) at the library, Kathleen Duncan and Tom Thompson stressed the leadership provided by the volunteer group in spawning many of today's municipal services. The WMA turned 100 last year.

Building up grassroots support for the demerger movement in Westmount and extending it into a multi-city movement was an overwhelming experience, said Duncan, who spearheaded the drive as WMA president from 2000 to 2004.

"You couldn't ask for a sexier issue," she said. "The ground covered by the WMA was extraordinary. This will form an important part of our history."

Interestingly, her own great-great grandfather, Ralph Whittall, was a vice president of the WMA in 1919, she pointed out.

city status, the WMA became the first organization of its kind in Quebec, Thompson pointed out. The work of its volunteers "probably set the tone for other municipalities in Quebec."

President from 1989 to 1992, Thompson traced the WMA's participation in major local events including early annexation attempts and the evolution of its own roles as advisor to council, supplier of candidates for municipal politics and more recently as a watchdog group to "ensure good governance."

"What is clear when looking at the service of the WMA for a century," he said, "is the need for balanced and vigilant input. The challenge for the WMA is to guide the discussion on municipal affairs and report results to the council."

WMA president Doreen Lindsay noted the "family connection" between the two organizations. In 1944, the WMA "gave birth" to the WHA to preserve the city's history.

Caroline Breslaw said the WHA is looking for photos, documents or other memorabilia from 1908 to help "give us an image of Westmount" at that time.

Earth Hour, Dark Sky Saturn and Cider on Saturday

BY EVE ASPINALL
MEMBER OF THE HEALTHY CITY PROJECT

Earth Hour arrives this Saturday, March 28 at 8:30 pm. Westmount hopes to redeem itself from its disappointing performance last year.

What is the big deal? It gives us the opportunity to look at our own habits and decide what is essential or non-essential, and how we can reduce energy use. It is the responsibility of all citizens to lower their consumption to help fight climate change.

It is hoped that everyone will remember to turn off their lights, unplug their appliances and lower their thermostats for one hour. It is vital that all external lights are off. If the outdoor lights are left on, they are depriving your fellow citizens the rare chance to enjoy the night sky.

Telescopes focus on Saturn

During this one hour there will be five telescopes set up at the Lookout on Summit Circle. They will be manned by five astronomers, professional and amateur, who are prepared to give those interested the benefit of their expertise.

There will also be a short talk about "Dark Skies and Astronomy" as well as why we are observing Earth Hour. The "star" of the night will be Saturn which, weather permitting, will be visible in the south-eastern sky.

This is why it is so imperative that we all do our part in darkening the city. Hydro Westmount is cooperating fully. They will turn off the lights at the Lookout and in the park below. Municipal buildings will be in darkness.

There will be earth-friendly refreshments - hot apple juice, locally produced and kept hot in thermoses and served in paper cups that are recyclable and biodegradable.

In addition it is BYOB, which means Bring Your Old Bulb. Your old incandescent bulb can be exchanged for a new CFL bulb absolutely free. This is on a first come, first served basis, one per person.

Ideally it would be great to see people walking up to the summit, but that is not easy for everyone. There will be a minibus for those who would find the climb too great. It will leave from city hall at 7:45 pm for the Lookout. Cars are discouraged - parking will be extremely limited. If necessary, please car-pool with others.

Mark it on your calendar, set your alarm clock, talk it up, telephone your neighbour if they have forgotten, turn off your lights and join the party.

Opinion Response to WMA on arena/pool consultation

BY PATRICK MARTIN, CITY COUNCILLOR
(DISTRICT 1)

There has been much comment lately, and most recently a letter from the Westmount Municipal Association (WMA), regarding the process surrounding the proposal to renew the pool and arena. Concern has been expressed that the public is not being sufficiently informed or consulted.

The letter of the WMA was addressed to the mayor and to each city councillor, and distributed publicly. Several of us on council have been asked, at community events or when meeting residents, for our views on the matter. I feel it important as one of the city's eight councillors to reply and address the points raised.

The WMA letter touches on five main points, namely the need for:

- Full disclosure of information,
- Sufficient time to reflect and evaluate the proposals,
- Opportunity for citizen opinions and suggestions,
- Resident input on the scope and scale of the project,
- Options for consideration other than just one "go/no-go" response.

Hopefully, by now many citizens know where I stand on the matter of public disclosure and the need for dissemination of information. As a result, I am pleased to support unreservedly the points brought out in the letter for full consultation during the two announced "information meetings." My personal view on the raised points is as follows.

Full disclosure: Though uncomfortable with the limited release of preliminary reports on the arena, I was swayed by the argument that early, incomplete public disclosure would distract from the focus and would be detrimental. But the project presentation date will very soon be upon us, and we expect the public information to include layouts, functionality, appearance, materials, sustainability, local impact, traffic and parking, integration with the park, capital costs, life-cycle costs, funding and financing, effect on city debt and tax rates, etc. Furthermore, detailed background information and reports should be made available to all interested residents.

Sufficient time: We are aware of time constraints posed by the availability of grants, the November elections, and ideal construction start-dates to reduce costs of winter conditions. But residents will need to have time to digest received information, and prepare questions and opinions at the meetings. The schedule shows insufficient time between the information meetings and the poll, such that surveyed residents will not have had time for meaningful reflection. The schedule needs adjustment to allow un-pressured deliberation by residents, and also by council.

Opportunity for suggestions: There is concern that information flow at the public meetings will be one-way. But this must not be so, and I intend to hold firm to this resolve. There is no doubt in my mind that these meetings are indeed consultative. I will also insist on receiving and reviewing all feedback received from residents' written submissions, emails, posting and other feedback.

Scope and scale: There is concern that the telephone poll will be a single, yes/no question. In my mind, this would be a wasted opportunity for consultation. The questions haven't yet been determined by council, and their exact wording may yet be guided by feedback from the public meetings, to obtain a real sense of community feeling about the proposals.

Options considered: It has been stated by the mayor that there is no Plan B, giving the impression that there would be only one "take it or leave it" concept. We are faced with a need to renew ageing sports infrastructure, and so to do nothing is not an option. But we must decide: do we simply refurbish/rebuild the existing buildings without taking into account current demand and modern norms? Or do we take advantage of the occasion, and the opportunity for government grants, to upgrade and expand the facilities, while providing necessary underground parking? Between these two options, the restricted site offers few possible variants, but the fundamental question regarding what taxpayers want must be on the table.

The above points are some of the essential elements of public input and due diligence by council that I am working hard to ensure will be embodied in our collective decision on what will undoubtedly be a major updating of the city's sports and recreation infrastructure, while improving the quality of life in the neighbourhood. I look forward to seeing you and hearing from you.

Civic Alert

Council's arena rush could end in a hangover

BY DON WEDGE

A decade ago, architect Derek Drummond drew up some concepts for a better arena in Westmount. "They didn't fly," he recalled the other day. "Only [former mayor] Peter Trent seemed to support them."

Drummond, now a McGill emeritus professor, is a core Westmount booster – it's probably fair to call him a lover of the place. At the time, he was ending multiple-year terms on the committee then called "Architectural and Planning."

Addressing the need for more facilities, Drummond proposed that summer tennis courts be refrigerated in winter and otherwise adapted to better supplement the indoor rink.

The solution could have removed a lot of today's problems, including costs. Successive city councils have continued to wrestle with what to do about the arena. Clearly, residents recognize the need for renewal.

A year ago, the public had a brief chance to draw up a wish list during a Saturday afternoon "think tank." Ever since, council has kept the big decisions – dreams versus reality – pretty close to the chest. Expectations are high for the proposals that are scheduled to be revealed on April 6.

One of the pivotal issues is the parking dilemma, which has been highlighted by residents.

Unfortunately, the more successful the arena is in attracting participants, the more car problems it brings to the neighbours. The hockey lobby does not envisage itself as pedestrian, not least given the need to carry over-sized bags of heavy equipment.

Counter-productive

Even so, it seems counter-productive to provide health-support facilities for people to exercise and then spend fortunes on real estate to accommodate their cars – plus the noise and pollution that inevitably follow.

The irony multiplies as planners create more playing opportunities. It is not just a question of the two dozen players on the ice during a game, but another two dozen more who are changing to or from street clothes. Their cars have to be accommodated, too.

To some city councillors, there seemed no alternative but to build underground parking. It is an expensive project, but cheaper to construct now rather than to add it later.

It is one of the late decisions made this month as the whole council learned the details of the project at a series of marathon meetings. An exceptionally long one on March 9 was followed by three more hours the following Monday in the St. Henri offices of Lemay, the chosen architects.

More extended sessions followed later during the week as council attempted to meet the imminent printing deadlines for the door-to-door version of the plan, which is due to be delivered the day after the April 6 unveiling.

On March 18 at noon, council interrupted its closed-door arena session for its scheduled public meeting.

Merger fight revisited

It seemed reminiscent of the never-ending decision-making needed when fighting the forced mergers in 2001.

With councillors needing so much time on the project plans, it seems unreasonable for them to expect citizens to determine the project's fate in a more-or-less instant telephone poll. Yet only 15 days have been allowed between the unveiling and the start of Ipsos-Reid's questioning.

In between is a busy fortnight that includes Passover, Good Friday, Easter and a long weekend for many, as well as the information meetings on April 18 and 21.

What opportunity will there be to discuss and debate council's proposal?

Even worse, the mayor said last summer there would be no more consultation, leading to the presumption by some that a "take it or leave it" question is being prepared.

Details remain remarkably secret. Councillors who are normally anxious to discuss their work remain tight-lipped about such key matters as the question's wording.

This combination of secrecy, multiple closed-door council sessions, no opportunity to question the proposals or put forward alternatives and, ultimately, rushed polling is the antithesis of modern ideas of democracy.

No wonder the Westmount Municipal Association has asked for more time. There are residents who would still like to see a gymnasium as part of the plan. Some want a covered pool, suspecting that if it is not built now, it will not be in their lifetime.

Others think that the cost of underground parking should instead be devoted to enhanced facilities.

What is, or is not, built now could set the status quo for decades. The 15-day rush to a decision could lead to some long-lasting regrets about the missed opportunity. That is a difficult hangover to contemplate.

Opinion

Needed: Tighter building permit by-laws, more neighbour consultation

BY LOUIS AUDET & JOCELYNE FRANCOEUR-AUDET

The Independent of January 13 included an instalment of the Mayor's Column (p. 4) entitled "Addressing and readdressing public input into urban planning". In it, Mayor Marks displays knowledge of the preoccupation of citizens with preserving their environment. The article was written to sound reassuring and it does.

But there are important unresolved problems.

Mayor Marks begins her column by stating that she is no longer reticent to express her views since "two litigious situations in our community dealing with ... the fact that views cannot generally be protected have been resolved." Mayor Marks clearly does not understand.

First, the two situations she is talking about have not been resolved: they have been dismissed by the courts.

Second, just in case Mayor Marks has not yet understood: citizens do generally want their views protected. If current regulations do not produce the results desired by citizens, then the regulations must be changed.

In the two situations, the defendants bought houses in Westmount and wanted to enlarge them, at the price of their neighbours' views and privacy.

Municipal discretion

In our case, Francoeur-Audet vs. Cytrynbaum, Judge Borenstein essentially whitewashed the defendant. The judgment is 10 pages long and provides little insight as to the thought process followed by the judge. The appeal judgment essentially reaffirmed that the judge of first instance was correct in her assessment of the facts and that cities are entrusted with discretionary powers.

The second judgment, Raymond vs. Goldberg, is of considerably greater interest because Judge Mongeon actually does explain, in a 60-page document, what his motivations were.

Having set the facts straight, he explains what his evaluation criteria were and then proceeds to describe his thought process. In essence, cities enjoy wide discretionary powers in applying municipal regulation.

The discretionary power can be challenged and the court will intervene, but only when that discretion was exercised for improper means, in bad faith, or in a discriminatory, unjust, arbitrary or unreasonable way.

When well-groomed, city-sponsored experts and elected and employed city officials appear before the courts, discriminatory or unreasonable exercise of a discretionary power is almost impossible to prove.

Smoking gun?

The intent is clear: don't bother us with your petty neighbourhood problems. You will never obtain justice unless there is a smoking gun in view.

Since the burden of proof in these cases is very high, injustice may be committed without there being any proper recourse in law. Hence, only two avenues are available.

The first one involves the elected officials mediating the problems before they become too big. It is our understanding that this was the approach under the previous Westmount municipal administration. Unfortunately, the current administration, with its strictly legalistic "see you in court if you are not happy" approach, has proven grossly inadequate.

If the discretionary powers of the city in these matters are reconfirmed as virtually non-attackable, then it follows that there is a heightened requirement for the city to do its job well, and to be seen to do it.

There is an increased need for accountability, diligence and governance, and not a decreased one, as some may be tempted to interpret the latest judgments.

Hence, the second of these two approaches is probably the only acceptable solution. The regulations must be tightened. In the mayor's current review process, we expect to see stringent rules.

Specifically, there is a requirement for prior consultation with neighbours when their view and privacy will be impacted.

There is a need for those who review these projects to visit the sites beforehand. In our case, not one city official took the time, even after repeated pleas on our part, to come to evaluate the impact.

Running in front of sheriff

Has it not struck the authorities that these two court cases are very similar? The two projects have been conceived and presented by the same architect, who in both instances pushed the envelope.

In both cases, a series of miscalculations resulted in a succession of project modifications that have resulted in further disadvantages to neighbours.

In our case, zoning by-law infractions were detected and had to be corrected by the defendants, all because of the work of our experts. In the Raymond vs. Goldberg case, we were appalled to witness city hall's "race against the clock," trying to approve changes to the project and make it good before the court hearing, as if running in front of the sheriff!

Canadian communities have been built on the European tradition of civility, care, compassion and common sense. Land grab, "sue me if you can" attitudes do not go well with the principles of conduct on which our country and our community were built. We require that Mayor Marks and city council wake up, take due note of this fact and fulfill their responsibilities.

City officials: 'Best place' for arena light

spondence with the mayor and council.

Designed to help arena users and others cross St. Catherine to and from the parking lot leased by the city behind the Montreal Oral School for the Deaf, "these lights are being put in on a temporary basis until the arena plans are finalized," explained interim Public Works director Marianne Zalzal.

"Bethune was considered to be the best place from safety, technical and cost effective points of view," explained Zalzal, who chairs the city's Administrative Traffic Committee.

Align light with arena roadway

Martin, Ikeman and others have suggested that aligning the light with the current arena entrance is safer and more practical. Zalzal said it would, however, be a more expensive temporary installation.

Since the work is now stalled awaiting the arrival of electrical material, this is an obvious time to look further into these issues, Martin said.

Placement of the light, Zalzal explained, has been thoroughly studied and recommended not only by the traffic committee but also by the city's retired director general Bruce St. Louis, who is project manager for the arena.

She also said positioning of the light some 30 to 40 feet east of the Bethune intersection was undertaken to lessen the danger from trucks turning east out of the city's Corporation Yard, which exits from Bethune. This intersection is further complicated by access to the Oral School parking lot and the POM condominium building at 4700 St. Catherine.

The pedestrian-activated light would remain green at all times except when a pedestrian pushes the button to cross.

When this occurs, traffic exiting Bethune would receive a warning light and sign before making the right-turn and coming upon the red light. It has been deemed safe by the city's traffic personnel and police.

"It's a bad location," Ikeman contends. He argues that heavy trucks will have insufficient time to stop. Moreover, "Some 'yo-yo' racing the lights at St. Catherine and Lansdowne" may also come upon it too quickly.

As a result, he fears the light will provide a false sense of security among pedestrians, who now must be vigilant in crossing the busy street.

Approved by SUE committee

City council's Safety, Utilities and Environment Committee approved the original Bethune location at its meeting October 22, said city councillor George Bowser.

Martin proposed the arena entrance alignment following this meeting, and the position was shifted slightly east as a result.

Ikeman suggests the position may be politically motivated to encourage use of the Oral School parking lot and justify excluding underground parking at the new arena, which is categorically denied by Mayor Karin Marks.

"This light is long overdue to help everyone cross the street including people at the dog run." One scenario for the new arena that council is believed to be considering is to position the new entrance closer to Bethune, which might realign with the proposed light.

If this location is recommended by a professional traffic consultant, Ikeman said, "then I'll rest my case. But what's the rush? Let's wait just a little longer and find out."

Indecency, 'hanging out', driving lead to tickets Spring fever at the Summit

It must be a harbinger of spring.

Westmount's public safety officers report issuing 11 tickets on March 12 and 13 to persons violating the city's midnight to 5 am park curfew by being at the Summit Lookout.

Most of the $37 tickets were given out around 1 am when people were found "hanging out." Offenders were described as young adults, all but one living outside Westmount.

Indecent behaviour

Two other tickets were issued March 9 to a couple "committing an indecent act in a park" also at the Lookout.

While parking is prohibited at the Lookout after 9 pm, the area, sandwiched between Summit and Sunnyside parks is also considered as a park and signed accordingly, officers said.

Driving in park

Three young persons were ticketed in the early hours of March 19 when their black SUV was spotted driving into Summit Park at 12:40 am.

Public Safety Officer Stephen Payne followed the 4x4 until it became blocked by boulders, hemming them in with the Public Security vehicle. He called police to identify the trio, and officer Tina Lanzon joined him at the scene.

The driver was issued a $37 ticket for driving a vehicle in the park, and all three received $37 tickets for being in the park after the midnight curfew.

Signage at the Lookout.

Fallen sign on Victoria Ave. after wild wind storm during the week of March 9. Or maybe it was the result of amateur parallel parking. Who knows?

Sign limiting parking to a maximum of two hours blew off its post on Prince Albert Ave. after the same wind storm two weeks ago. Did anybody feel entitled to park in this area for more than two hours? The sign has since been fixed.

At Atwater Library in May

World champions, Mayor Marks at Scrabble fundraiser

The Atwater Library and Computer Centre will host a Scrabble fundraiser on Saturday, May 9, from 12:45 pm to 4 pm.

"We're challenging people to come out to raise money for the library," said executive director Lynn Verge. "This is not a serious Scrabble competition. It's an opportunity to have a fun time, meet people from the library and from the community, and raise much-needed funds."

World Scrabble champions Joel Wapnick and Dave Boys, and Mayor Karin Marks will participate. For a fee, the champions will play turns for players. Competitors can also play a whole game against them or Marks.

Register two days in advance

The pledge minimum is $50 for adults and $20 for people under 18. To play, people have to register at least two days in advance by contacting Tanya Mayhew at the Atwater library. Pledge sheets are available online (www.atwaterlibrary.ca) or at the library.

All proceeds from this event will fund the Atwater Library's community educational and cultural programs. Tax receipts will be issued for donations over $15.

Sponsors of the event include Paragraphe Books, Supermarché PA, Guido and Angelina, Miss Brown Dry Cleaning, Coiffure Jean Jean, Richard Delisle of Simple Dream Publishing, and Liberty Yogurt.

9 Lives: Mama and her kittens

BY LYZANNE

An abandoned cat herself and only about a year old, Mama Cat had her three kittens outside last August and brought them to the door of a kind woman when her litter became mobile. Though this person felt sorry for them, she could not bring them inside because her own cat would not tolerate it. Mama Cat was very wary, but friendly. She took good care of her kittens. She would watch as the lady put food out daily for the little family. When winter came, the lady fixed up a box outside for them to seek shelter from the cold.

On a bitterly cold winter day, the woman was able to coax the three kittens into her home, at which point Gerdy, from Gerdy's Rescue, took them to the vet. But Mama Cat would not come in, try as Gerdy might. She was a wise cat and did not trust humans. One day, the woman looked out the window to see Mama Cat perched on her doorstep, looking inside with a bleeding eye. It was bitterly cold outside, with a lot of snow. The cat was finally convinced to come inside, and Gerdy spent New Year's Day at the DMV vet hospital getting Mama Cat treatment!

One of Mama Cat's kittens was adopted right away. Mama Cat is now so friendly, sweet-natured and beautiful. Her two remaining kittens, Alex and Joy, now seven months old, have turned out to be very affectionate and healthy! Homes need to be found for all three, together or separately. Don't forget, however, two cats are often less trouble than one! They have all been seen by the vet, vaccinated and spay/neutered.

To find out more please page Gerdy at 514.203.9180 or email info@gerdysrescue.org.

Many thanks for giving these sweet cats a chance at adoption!

Throw it, trade it, sell it – just edit it

BY GRETA VON SCHMEDLAPP,
MUSE TO AURÉLIEN GUILLORY

Hello, my dear Design Fiends. I really must rush this letter out to you all – as usual, I have neglected you...I must blame my partner in art crime, Aurel Guillory, for the many distractions he presents to me daily. Take this letter I am writing to you from Ottawa, for example. I am tapping away on my fellow design/architects' big Macintosh computer (like mine) here in the trendy Glebe neighbourhood that houses the well-known architect Barry Hobin's Glasgow condos (with loads of Charles Rennie MacIntosh influences). At least my fingers and eyes find familiarity on the keyboard and screen.

However, this afternoon, with a lovely hint of imminent spring hovering in the air, I can still see the vision of Bernini's portrait bust of his tragic Constance hovering in my soul from my visit to the National Gallery of Canada. It was the last day for the exhibit, and definitely worth the trip. So, as a truant from my comfy studio in Montreal, I must recount some recent experiences with Aurel and the word of the season: Edit!

My friends here have moved four times in 10 years. They moved from Paris to Montreal, within Montreal and now to the capital. They have confronted their demons and have also learned the cursed word "edit." They have thrown out every book that they think "didn't contribute to their lives somehow." The rule that you must recycle all clothes you have not worn in one year remains also valid for furnishing items stashed in the back closet. "When I lose 15 pounds" or "when I find the right colour top to fit" – these phrases are NOT allowed! That my friends still possess (and often use) about 2,600 books is testimony to their priorities. Do think deeply about yours. Do use the marvelous friperies and retro shops. I have found some of the best vases there. Amhurst St. from Sherbrooke down to St. Catherine is a hot-bed of treasures and places where you can sell those edited things.

The same goes for furniture that you keep promising to refinish: throw it, trade it, or best, sell it for your travel fund. I am not impressed with clutter, and I often poke fun at Aurel over his Baroque tendencies. If you don't feel like you can pass it on to your best friend or your children, don't buy it! Now, enough lecturing. Please come to Aurel's presentation at the Westmount Public Library on Thursday, March 26, 1:30 pm, to hear his "Designs for Downsizing: The Perfect Home", which is part of the Art Focus series, created by the gracious and genius Virginia Lemoyne. Reservations are requested. Please call Virginia at 514.937.6391.

Well, my dears, I must get Aurel organized for the trip out west. Your Greta von Schmedlapp.

ON THE SHELVES

Among the arrivals at the Westmount Public Library singled out by staff are:

Magazines

“Terminated: why the women of Wall Street are disappearing. After the scandals of the 1990s, didn’t investment banks put sexist employment practices behind them? Evidently not.” by Anita Raghavan in Forbes, March 16, 2009, p. 72

“Les femmes du Président: Comment Sarkozy les juge. Avec la crise, le code a changé. Rachida, Rama, Roselyne, Fadela, Christine... Moins de deux ans après leurs nominations, les étoiles de certaines ont pâli quand d’autres brillent désormais au firmament. Revanche des fourmis laborieuses sur les cigales médiatiques.” by Runo Jeudy and Carl Meeus in Le Figaro Magazine, March 7, 2009, p. 28

DVDs

Strong bones yoga – Christine Dormaier presents three 20-minute workouts based on yoga postures performed using small hand weights and designed to help build strong bones and tone the body.

Ensemble c’est tout – A trio of misfits living together in a Parisian apartment discover what it truly feels like to be part of a family when they must work together in order to rescue one of the group’s aging grandmother.

La graine et le mulet – This award-winning film embraces several ambitious themes: the elders’ need to pass on a legacy to their families, the struggles faced by Arabs in France, the tensions and rivalries which hound large families, and the surprising ways a dream can draw people together in a common mission.

Mysteries – in the General Sense

When can I retire? Planning your financial life after work by Andrew Allentuck.

This is a realistic, no-nonsense approach to the complexities of retirement planning for Canadians.

The Gardner Heist by Ulrich Boser – This is the true story of the world’s largest unsolved art theft. On March 18, 1990, two men broke into the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum in Boston and stole a dozen masterpieces valued at over $500 million. The art detective assigned to the case has since died, and the author had access to all his case files.

“Le monde des livres”

These two novels are taken from Le Monde’s selection of the must-read books from 2009’s “rentrée littéraire”.

En enfance by Mathieu Lindon – A sensitive exploration of childhood memories by an author and literary critic, whose father was a famous editor. Lindon offers short sketches on the everyday life of a pre-adolescent in the 1960’s.

La Trahison de Thomas Spencer de Philippe Besson – Set in the United States, this is the story of Paul and Thomas, two inseparable childhood friends. Their meeting with Claire, a free and bold woman, will open a chasm between them, and tragedy will follow.

Picture Books

Walt Disney’s Cinderella retold by Cynthia Rylant – Mary Blair’s original illustrations for the animated film are presented in this beautiful retelling of a classic by the talented Cynthia Rylant.

Le noeud de la girafe by Michael Escoffier and Kris Di Giacomo – One morning Giraffe wakes up to find that his long neck is in a knot! None of the specialists knows how to cure him until Elephant shows them that sometimes laughter can be the best medicine!

Underdog

BY FERN BRESLAW

We are all aware that Quebec has a rather crumby track record when it comes to animal rights. Puppy mills flourish, dogs and cats are discarded like a pair of last season's Tory Burch shoes.

I think we often forget just how much worse the situation is in other parts of the world. This week Annie comes as our reminder.

She was sent over from Lebanon where some dogs are treated in ways we won't begin to describe. BETA (Beirut for the Ethical Treatment of Animals) has struggled to properly place the dogs it rescues locally. Over the past year it has flown out over 150 animals for placement in North America.

Annie (who is a mix of who knows what) was found tied to a tree, starving – just skin and bones. She had lost all her fur, and her teeth had rotted from malnutrition.

After almost a year in recovery at the shelter in Beirut and having all of her teeth removed, she has been sent to us in the hope of finding a proper home. She is quite small, good with dogs and cats and though she may be lacking in beauty on the outside, she more than makes up for it with what's on the inside.

If you are interested in meeting Annie, please contact Sophie's Dog Adoption at 514.523.5052.

Wine: What's In Store...

The girls' or guys' night in

BY CAROLA PRICE

I have come to the realization that I drink a lot of wine. Sure there is a smattering of Scotch, grappa and whiskey thrown in to keep me in practice but I spend most of my time in a vinous state. Since all my money is frittered away on wine and food, I thought it was time to write about finding good value for your wine dollar.

I dare say that in this time of belt tightening, the first thing to go is luxury, and that means rarely hitting a restaurant table with gusto. I am imploring you, good readers, to pick up a fab cookbook at Appetite for Books, grab the ingredients at Atwater Market and pop open a bottle or two. Your total bill is a fraction of what you may spend dining out, and you've tried a few new wines and recipes at cost price. Who knows you may find your inner Jamie Oliver or Nigella Lawson.

Let's taste:

Shiraz, Ned & Henry's, Hewitson, Barossa Valley.
SAQ#10959776. $21.95

This Aussie red blew me away in terms of price-quality ratio. It is a big wine that can cellar and has the easy-to-open screwcap I am so fond of. Pair it with grilled meat and Mediterranean food, Oka, goat Camembert and Douanier. It softens up when decanted or swirled in a big glass and has a full bodied nose and flavour of black fruit and pepper.

Available at press time: Victoria, Across from the Atwater Market.

Tempranillo, Celeste, Torres, Ribera del Duero. SAQ#10461679. $20.85

This is classic Spanish wine that is more New World in terms of approachability. It smells of raspberry and blackberry with some tobacco, lead and coffee in the nose (Spanish wine tends to be restrained at first whiff) and leads to earthy tastes and some dark fruit flavour in the mouth. This is a wine for short-term cellaring and goes well with all meats and heavier weight fish, grilled vegetables and mashed potatoes with green onion and cheddar.

Available at press time: Across from the Atwater Market.

Chardonnay, Colio Estate, Niagara.
SAQ#10846245. $10.85

This is a dry, crisp white that showcases the fruit. It sees no oak so the flavour and nose is all green apple, grass and some citrus. It is medium-bodied and pairs well with vegetarian dishes, lemon chicken, grilled or baked firm fish and cheeses like Manchengo, Au Pied de Vent and Chevre Noir.
