

City: Space is lacking at community centre

Youth Orchestra to leave Vic Hall, finds new premises

By LAUREEN SWEENEY

Mayor Christina Smith opened the city council meeting August 6 saying she had received many letters deploring the departure of the Westmount Youth Orchestra (WYO) from Victoria Hall, premises she said the group has outgrown.

In its 23 years, it had expanded from 12 to 130 members and grown from using one room to much of the community centre for most of the day on Saturdays, a time the city also needs it for other requests and its own programs.

While not reported at the council meeting, the WYO is expected to be moving to the Sacred Heart School, an option it has been offered for the coming season, administrative coordinator Laurence Gironne told the Independent.

Mayor Smith also confirmed the city had offered to continue the organization's arrangement at Victoria Hall until at least January to give the group longer if needed to find new premises, "and I was prepared to go even longer," she added.

"We're excited they're going to be performing at Victoria Hall and are booking the dates," she added.

Smith also said she had met a few months ago with two of the WYO's board members, who had acknowledged the organization had outgrown Victoria Hall and already appeared to be looking for a possible new venue.

Use of the city's community centre has long been based on not-for-profit groups having a

Mayor Smith calls for 'decorum, courtesy' at meetings

By LAUREEN SWEENEY

Citizens attending the council meeting August 6 were reminded by Mayor Christina Smith of the chamber's "long tradition of conducting city business in a decorous, civil and fact-based manner."

"All this ensures that the city's elected officials can best serve the interests of the citizenry in accordance with our traditions and the by-laws governing the conduct of council meetings," she explained.

The "tone" of recent sessions, she said, had suggested that important principles "need to be reiterated," a reference in part to the July 3 session, at which there was interrupting and shouting.

So, while common sense and common courtesy should suffice to allow council and citizens to engage in "a polite and mutually respectful way," she said, the city's by-laws en-

Posting of AGIL report further delayed, Mayor Smith meets with southeast group

BY LAUREN SWEENEY

A long-awaited posting of a consultants' report on a planning vision for the city's southeast sector has been further delayed until a meeting on it can be held between city officials and Mayor Christina Smith, she told the council meeting August 6.

Though residents of the area had been asking even the former council to post the AGIL report online, Smith said in June that she had expected to table the report at the council's July 3 session, followed by its posting (see story June 19, p. 7).

She agreed at the August 6 council meeting with questioner Denis Biro that it was taking longer than expected but she would be meeting about it August 13 with city director general Benoit Hurtubise and assistant director general Sandra Avakian.

At the end of July, Smith and city officials met with a group of four District 8 residents who represented a number of people in the area south of Dorchester concerned about the AGIL report.

Included at the meeting were Toby Morantz of Clandeboye, Patricia Dumais of Greene, Jim Richards of Dorchester and Willem Westenberg of Stayner. District 8 Councillor Kathleen Kez was out of the country so did not attend.

"We were assured the city would be starting afresh," Morantz said last week and that southeast planning would be transparent and well communicated. "But we'll be watching."

Morantz also said the four residents made it clear that "we still don't want Dorchester narrowed or the (Tupper) parking lots developed except for multi-use green space. But we're open to all ideas."

50-percent Westmount membership, as reaffirmed last year (see story October 31, 2017). The WYO's is 14 percent.

Smith said it became "difficult for us" to balance the needs of other groups requesting Saturdays but "I think we could have communicated better."

Departure a shock

"People are in shock" over the WYO's departure, Margaret Wada of Argyle told the council meeting.

She said she did not realize the city had taken over the building as a community centre. She read out a message from her daughter, who had played in the orchestra, explaining how important the experience had been for her.

If the WYO can't benefit from members outside the community, it can't benefit Westmount residents, Wada said.

Following up, a resident of Upper Belmont asked the council to increase transparency of room use at Victoria Hall by putting bookings online as Centre Greene does. "We certainly can look at it," Smith said.

'Incredible edibles' grown to be taken at 30 spots

BY LAUREN SWEENEY

Try strawberries from York and St. Catherine, tomatoes from the Westmount recreation centre, hot peppers from Victoria Hall or Swiss chard from Devon Park.

These are only some of this summer's "incredible edibles" planted for the eighth year by the city at some 30 locations where the fruits and vegetables can be picked.

"We plant thousands of them," Councillor Cynthia Lulham announced at the council meeting August 6. While inviting residents to help themselves, she asked that they limit their harvest to 10 percent of any vegetable or fruit at a given time and avoid damaging or pulling out the plants.

Locations and varieties can be found on a map on the city's website by entering "incredible edibles" in the search box and clicking on Westmount Incredible Edibles.

Several banana trees from the closed greenhouses have also been planted in the large bed by the watercourse in Westmount Park, though it is unlikely they will produce fruit due to the short growing season though they did indoors, according to city horticulturist Jayme Gerbrandt.

Part of a world-wide agriculture initiative, the aim of the Incredible Edibles program is to increase awareness about food security and prompt gardeners to grow food at home as well as use vegetables and fruits to bring what is described as "unique beauty" to flower beds.

Survey of Westmount Park pinpoints needs

Blitz under way to attend to park maintenance

BY LAUREEN SWEENEY

A blitz is under way to address the routine maintenance of city parks, city director general Benoit Hurtubise told the Independent after concerns voiced at the council meeting August 6. This applies to such items as the repair and painting of benches, grass and greenery.

The concerns were raised during question period by Patrick Barnard of Melville, who said the condition of some benches in Westmount Park had led him to conduct an entire park survey. He identified patches of brown grass, needed renewal of the circular flower bed north of the bike path and some 28 benches ready for repair in the playground and nearby areas.

“I’m making a plea for maintenance,” he said after saying about half the park areas needed fixing.

Barnard found the floral clock, bleachers, benches around the Melville pond and comfort stations to be in “pretty good” shape and some wood on benches had already been replaced but needed painting.

“We need to put more resources into the park,” said Councillor Cynthia Lulham, whose commissionership includes parks. She said she had been asking for more parks budgets for several years and this was achieved this year. “The parks are for everyone.” To Barnard’s list, she added trees growing up in shrubs.

John Fretz of Lansdowne, recalled that a year ago Lulham had listed a number of items that needed tending and asked, “Why hasn’t anything been done?”

Lulham said she was “very disappointed in the state of the parks.” She said she had toured all of them in May. She then returned two weeks ago to find out what items had been addressed and found “nothing had.” While the budget is now there for parks, she explained, she suggested a lack of personnel to supervise contractors might be the reason.

Never been so clean

She later told the Independent, however, that the parks “had never been so clean” and that she had been frustrated at the council meeting by what she took to be an allegation by Fretz that she had not done her “job.”

She explained that while the budget was in place to maintain the parks, “there is an issue that needs to be resolved: We have good people in place (at Public Works) who are working as hard as they can, but do we have enough and in the right places?”

A lot of the work is done by contractors who need to be supervised, Lulham added. She said the city’s assistant director general, Sandra Avakian, will provide “fresh eyes in looking at the issue.”

Considering the city is also working on major projects such as restoration of the greenhouses and the overall infrastructure analysis and renewal of Westmount Park, management resources are also limited.

“It’s very easy to criticize,” she added, but Westmount Park in particular, “is suffering from so much use, especially the playground.” The city also has “so many gardens” to be tended.

Mayor Christina Smith reiterated that “we’re committed to investing in the parks.” While this has been “the hottest summer ever, we can do things better. There’s no reason why we can’t have the best parks and be more creative.”

She said she was pleased to have Barnard’s list to give to Public Works.

REVIEW

KOZAK KILLS, HOMER LIVES

BY DAVID PRICE

Twenty-two streets east of Westmount, in a bar on Park Ave., a major Montreal cultural event has just come to an end. McGill classics professor Lynn Kozak finished her 29-part recital of The Iliad on August 6.

Why care about Homer's Iliad, a novel-length poem that tells the story of Achilles' dispute with over-king Agamemnon during the Trojan War? In conversation, one friend suggested, "Because it's a great story." To which I replied, "It's the first story!" (Which is not quite true, but pretty close.)

I would add upon further reflection that The Iliad is great because it deals – excellently – with everything: war, peace, diplomacy, love, hate, pity, loss, grief, friendship, family, compromise, stubbornness, oratory, politics, religion, natural ability (and lack of it), fate, injustice, free will, courage, cowardice, loyalty, life, death. It would be easier to list what it doesn't deal with. (Care Bears, Facebook and veganism are about all that I can come up with.)

Coming and going to this Monday-at-six-pm event, I've run into various friends and acquaintances, and there have been a few repeat reactions.

Q: "You're going to a lecture on The Iliad?"

A: "No, I am going to The Iliad, period. Kozak is performing (or reciting) it." (Each performance was about an hour in length.)

Q: "You're going to hear excerpts from The Iliad?"

A: "No, she is performing the whole thing, heroes' and towns' names, everything." (The final part of her rehearsal was to look at the Greek immediately beforehand and then recite in English, with very occasional help from a prompter.)

I was alerted to the series, variously called "Happy Hour Homer" and "Previously ... on The Iliad," by CBC Radio (local news matters!), which broadcasts its control booth on tv on weekdays from 6 am to 7 am. I was grazing from one traditional tv show to another, and I think I saw the words on the news crawl, "McGill prof. performs The Iliad." I could not believe my eyes. While I have no ancient Greek, I am a big fan of the poem, as I am proving with this piece. I was even more surprised when I read or heard she was doing it in a bar.

'Fun happens in bars'

Now, I have long been a disciple of Ken Miller, the Freaks and Geeks character played by Seth Rogen, who famously said, "Everything fun in this world happens in bars," but I hadn't expected this. It was even better when I got there and checked out Bar des pins, the venue for all the performances save one. It may be hard for the attentive reader of this newspaper to believe, but I had somehow never been there before. Here was an unpretentious Mon-trepreneurial student bar, laid out in the classic Montreal shoebox shape (narrow storefront, one long main room, bathrooms at the back), that was going to host one of the oldest works of human literature. One time, it seemed that a couple wandered in not knowing what was planned. They stayed for the show anyway, enjoying their cups and the show. The choice of Monday night could not have been better for me personally, since the Independent's "week" ends on Monday at noon when we send the finished files to the printer.

Bar = ruler's hall?

To my semi-educated mind, the bar venue fit how the poem would have been originally performed. I imagined a poet showing up at a city-state in ancient Greece and convincing the local ruler to allow him to perform. When would he do so? After dinner, with the ruler's family, warriors, servants and subjects listening, drinks in hand – just like at Bar des pins.

(The series sparked my curiosity, and I have since discovered there is a mystery and lively debate about when and how The Iliad was composed and performed. Was it written in one go like a modern author writing a novel? Was it put together from other poems? Did it exist orally, whole and complete for many years (decades? centuries?), before being put to "paper"? And when did all this happen? The oldest manuscript dates from the 10th century AD. Did it come into final form around 800 BC, the traditional estimate, or was it tinkered with by subsequent editors, including the librarians of Alexandria?)

Regardless, the performances did not disappoint. Kozak performed all the lines without introduction or explanatory lecture. It was The Iliad, without adornment. A different director worked on each night and chose a different set and costume for Kozak, giving each performance its own flavour. There were sometimes a few actors added for effect, but generally it was a one-woman show.

Laughs, manliness and other stuff

Kozak went for more laughs than I would have expected or chosen, often riffing off what Homeric language sounds like to modern ears. Eurymedon, for instance, "loved manliness," which drew laughs from the audience and the performer. The characters' decisions to eat at various dramatic points were also presented humorously.

Sometimes her choice of language was intentionally funny. The god Hephaestus, traditionally called "bowlegged," was described as having "a disability in both legs." She chose colloquial language ("Zeus was planning bad things," a shield had "cobalt stuff," "there's a woodcutter guy," some characters were "sidekicks," "Hector didn't know anything that was going on," a character "was being awesome") more often than I would have thought or chosen.

She made other choices that surprised me. In the first performance that I attended (week 7, on February 26), she performed Glaukos' lines:

Why ask my birth, Diomedes? Very like leaves

Upon this earth are the generations of men – Old leaves, cast on the ground by wind, young leaves

The greening forest bears when spring comes in.

So mortals pass; one generation flowers Even as another dies away.

(Fitzgerald translation, Book Six, lines 168-173)

in a laughing, dismissive way. It was like being slapped in the face. I had always seen this passage as an existential cri-de-coeur, not a throwaway dodge by a minor character. But who cares? The Iliad had come alive, and it is always worth going back to it, and questioning one's assumptions. And leaving aside this specific case, on second thought, while I might like a 30-hour, sombre, solemn performance of The Iliad, it might not have been a crowd-pleaser. (At other moments, Kozak's presentation was solemn and sombre, just not all the time.)

(The whole series is also on YouTube. In my view, if the recording quality can support it, it should also be made available in a higher-resolution format. Netflix? DVD? Speaking for myself, my computer is not a good way to look at longer videos.)

Bottom line, I salute Kozak for this major achievement, as did the audience, which grew each week until the bar was at capacity and which gave her a standing ovation on the final night. As one woman put it at the end of week 14 (April 23), "Where do you get your courage from? You're badass!"

Kozak ended the whole series by saying, "That's it. I'm dead," (probably speaking for Hector). She could not be more wrong. Homer is alive in Montreal and on YouTube thanks to her. Personally, I'll never feel the same way about Monday nights again. Drinking beer and listening to Homer? It's all downhill from here.*

*Although the steepness of the slope could be alleviated by a performance of The Odyssey, a lesser work in my view, but one perhaps more suited to performance. What action-adventure plot doesn't happen in it?

WYO decision taken in light of longstanding approach, current demands

Mayor's Column

This is the background to our recent decision to ask the Westmount Youth Orchestra (WYO) to find a new rehearsal space. I wish to ensure that Westmounters understand both the background and the rationale for the city's decision.

The Westmount Youth Orchestra (WYO) began as a small and primarily Westmount-based activity. To its great credit and due to the hard work of its directors, over the years, it has grown and become successful far beyond the expectations of its original founders. It now has over 130 musicians from all parts of Montreal and beyond. Westmounters now comprise only a minority (14 percent) of its members. This fact came to light after a recent routine review of its membership, something that has been carried out somewhat inconsistently over the years, to the detriment of groups who comply with the 50-percent Westmounter policy.

Other groups asking for Saturdays

The WYO has made use of the facilities at Victoria Hall for rehearsals from September to June at no cost, even though it is an autonomous and self-financing entity. It generates income from concerts it holds in various locations, including Westmount's Victoria Hall, as well as from membership fees. It has a coveted Saturday slot, which is frequently requested by other groups, but unavailable during the school year.

I want to thank the members of the WYO board who took the time to meet with me and then continued our dialogue on this important issue. It is also important to emphasize that we need to offer rooms to other Westmount groups and at the same time the WYO had outgrown the space of Victoria Hall due to the rooms we have available. It is clear that the WYO is entering a period of transition, and West-mount city council is determined to be as helpful and supportive as it can. We understand that the WYO has found a new rehearsal space and look forward to their continued performances and concerts at Victoria Hall. We have also indicated our willingness to be flexible regarding the orchestra's moving date so that it has ample time to relocate.

As we try to balance the many demands from groups that wish to use Victoria Hall, particularly on weekends, it is time for us to re-assess our activities and programming from the perspective of what our citizens want, as well as changes in demographics. Residents are working longer, and more families have two working parents. All of this means that we are experiencing an increase in demand for cultural and sports activities taking place on weekends.

In the interest of an equitable use of our resources, while giving priority to Westmount citizens, we are confident we will allow more Westmounters to take advantage of Victoria Hall, our community centre, and that it will be a hub of activity throughout the school year and beyond.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

GET THE ADMINISTRATION GOING ON PARKS

The city's response to the dreadful condition of Westmount Park is completely incomprehensible and disheartening. During the August council meeting, Patrick Barnard provided an exhaustive list of the long-running deficiencies in the park that could be readily corrected. John Fretz then provided an impassioned review of the debates over the last five years in council where park condition issues were repeatedly brought up, corrective commitments made by council, then only to be broken. As the commissioner responsible for parks, Councillor Lulham responded with a litany of reasons why nothing happened. First, years ago there was no budget for it. Then the money was made available but no workers were provided.

Now both money and staff are available but still very little is being done. While expressing disappointment and exasperation, Councillor Lulham also said she now has no idea why almost nothing was moving forward. Just wonderful.

Westmount Park is regarded by many to be a crown jewel of the city. Either council members over the years have collectively concluded that residents in fact remain unconcerned with the poor condition of the park and therefore consciously let it deteriorate while, at the same time, providing residents with the impression that council really cared.

Or instead, while seriously desiring to properly maintain the park, council has lost its ability to direct the city administration, which, on its own, decided that it has other more pressing priorities in its workload. Enough endless talk, years of inaction and delay.

Councillors, find your backbone and either direct the city administration to immediately get on with it, or level with the Westmount community and tell our residents not to expect any corrective action and just learn to live with a second-rate park.

DENIS BIRO, BURTON AVE.

END OF CITY-WYO RELATIONSHIP A CATASTROPHE

Open letter to Mayor Smith and Councillor Gallery

I write to you in great shock having heard of the ending of the relationship between the Westmount Youth Orchestra and Victoria Hall. Having grown up in Westmount, I was a member of the WYO for many years during high school, and found the experience of playing in a youth orchestra to be an invaluable experience for a young mind.

Bixis and Victoria Hall on August 13. There were 8 bikes and 7 empty spots at 10:20 am.

Moreover, I believe any youth orchestra should be seen as a cherished member of a community, fostering the artistic talents of young musicians, who in turn give back to the community in the form of concerts and as proud ambassadors when they play at festivals. Indeed, when I was a member we played in Quebec-wide music competitions, performed at the prestigious Lanaudière International Music festival and participated in an exchange program with the youth orchestra from Saguenay-Lac St. Jean, all representing the city of Westmount. Even just last month, my parents, who have been Westmount residents for 40 years, attended a full-capacity concert of the WYO and were raving to me about the music that they heard.

While I am away pursuing my studies and professional development at Caltech in Pasadena, California, I have been fortunate enough to join their orchestra and must mention that at every concert, without exception, members of the community come to orchestra members and thank us for volunteering our time to perform music. Thus, not only is it a very enriching experience for the members that play in the orchestra, it enriches the community around it.

I think Westmount is making a catastrophic mistake in pushing away such a prized asset of the community. I am at a complete loss at the decision process behind such a move, and I believe that the city council owes its residents and every current and past member of the WYO answers for such a damaging decision!* Rather than ending its relationship with the WYO, the city of Westmount should be going out of its way to find means to further support the orchestra, reverse this decision and apologize to all members of the orchestra.

LICENSE THE BIKES

Dogs, cars, and motorcycles all require licences. Why not bicycles?

Hopefully, it would make cyclists more responsible and diligent in obeying the rules.

Some cyclists are very rude, annoying and think they own the road. They could be given tickets for misdemeanours.

I am very glad cyclists have been banned from [Mount Royal] ..... cemetery (as of August 1). continued on p. 9

PSOs first on the scene to provide help to collapsed man outside the SAQ

BY LAUREEN SWEENEY

A public safety officer driving a woman and dog she found on Sunnyside to a vet clinic on Victoria Ave. to check for microchip identification August 3, was approached at a traffic light at 5:01 pm to help a man who appeared “in trouble,” Public Security officials said. The man was reported to have fallen while exiting a car in front of the Société des alcools du Québec on Sherbrooke.

The officer found him lying on the sidewalk while a nurse had already started CPR. Two other patrol cars arrived and together the officers began chest compressions and defibrillation while awaiting fire department first responders and Urgences Santé. Part of Sherbrooke was blocked at Grosvenor.

A family member was reported to be on the scene when the man was taken to the MUHC Glen site. He was believed to be around 70 but personal information was not recorded, given the attention required at the scene, according to Public Security director Greg McBain.

Looking west from Sherbrooke and Grosvenor at 5:20 pm on August 3. For another photo, see August 7, p. 4.

There was no update on his condition. “Cases like this show how important the training of our officers is in first aid,

CPR and defibrillation use,” McBain said. “They were able to respond within seconds and were the first responders on the scene. I was proud how well they worked as a team in a stressful situation.”

Letters, cont'd. from p. 8

This will restore the quiet tranquility of the cemetery.

We need more bike lights. The bike light at Fort and de Maisonneuve is excellent. How about installing a bike light at Metcalfe and de Maisonneuve? It is almost impossible to make a left turn on a school morning!

I grew up in Toronto, and it was mandatory to have a licence to ride my bike to school.

Some of the old ways were better!

BEVERLEY HUTCHISON,
KITCHENER AVE.

P.S. I hope all of you at the Indie enjoyed a well-deserved holiday?

Editor's reply: We did! Thank you. – DP

WESTMOUNT'S BIXI DEMAND LIKELY EVEN HIGHER

It was very interesting to read in the July 3 issue that the Bixi station at Greene and de Maisonneuve is the busiest in Montreal. As a frequent Bixi user (more than 160 trips in the 2016 season) who lives near the Victoria Hall station, I would like to point out that the way usage data is collected and interpreted can skew the results.

This morning, I spoke to a Bixi staffer who was busy taking bikes out of the Victoria Hall station and loading them onto a trailer, to be moved to other stations. He confirmed that this is done so that there will be docks available for the afternoon so commuters can return bikes. He also confirmed what has been my frequent observation, both visually and using the Bixi app on my phone, that the Victoria Hall station is empty of bikes for long periods of time, most afternoons.

Of course, I'm checking only because I want to use a Bixi from that station. But I can't when there are no bikes available. And there is no way to let the Bixi organization know that a potential trip from that station did not happen, because they only record trips. They have not provided themselves with any mechanism to assess demand during times when the “shelves are empty.” Whereas car dealers have wait lists and retailers offer rain cheques, Bixi does nothing, and therefore is totally unable to make an informed decision about either enlarging the station at Victoria Hall, or ensuring that there are at least a couple of bikes available most of the time. I'd bet that these changes would bump up its usage ranking!

How hard would it be to add a button to the phone app to let Bixi know that I want to use a bike from an empty station? And then have the app notify me when a bike becomes available?

Medical-education book donated to Atwater Library

BY HEATHER BLACK

McGill professor Dr. Donald Boudreau presented a copy of Physicianship and the Rebirth of Medical Education to head librarian Kimberley Ryan at the Atwater Library on August 9. Ryan, who has been head librarian since June 2017, said: "It's always a pleasure to showcase Montreal authors at the Atwater Library."

Boudreau co-wrote the book over a six-year period with McGill colleagues Dr. Abraham Fuks, and American medical philosopher Dr. Eric Cassell.

Published this spring by Oxford University Press, Boudreau said: "The book lays out the pedagogical methods required to nurture physicianship in medical students where impairments of function should be the primary concern of physicians."

It also presents a patient-centred model of medical education which recognizes the work of the legendary Sir William Osler.

The cover design features the collage "Val-lum Hadrianus: The Maritime Theatre, Villa Tivoli" by John Schweitzer, who said he was "honoured to have my work chosen for the cover." An exhibition of his collages, John A. Schweitzer: Text & Image will take place at the Westmount Public Library in September.

LYSANNE FOWLER

Here she is, adorable and loving Lilly kitten. Now five months old and in foster care for Gerdy's Rescue, we could never tell that she was taken in by rescue volunteers and veterinary staff after falling from a third-floor balcony and being left with a broken leg. She was so tiny and has stolen every single heart along on the way to recovery.

Lilly is a joyous purring ball of energy, running and jumping like every other kitten her age. She has a lovely personality, happily affectionate and companionable to all in her foster family, including dogs and cats.

If you would like to make a little spot for her in your family, please do not hesitate to contact Gerdy's Rescue volunteers at info@gerdysrescue.org. You might also shrine these principles, which the mayor has powers to enforce.

Without listing the by-law sections at the meeting, notes she prepared from a consolidation by-law, number 1336, prohibit declarations as well as all forms of demonstration.

The by-law "makes it clear" that question period does not constitute a forum for demonstrations of any kind (section 13). It also prohibits "the interruption or hindrance of person asking a question" (section 19).

The mayor's powers include those to limit or withdraw the right to speak when rules are not followed as well as expulsion of "persons or groups who misuse question period for demonstrative purposes affecting the meeting's order or decorum," (sections 19 and 20).

ANDY DODGE

544 Lansdowne Ave., on what was Dolan Ave.

544 Lansdowne.

One of Westmount's earliest pioneers was a dry-goods merchant named Francis Dolan, who purchased the St. Germain farm leading up the hill from St. Catherine St. (which at the time was "little Côte St. Antoine Rd.," according to Hopkins' Atlas) to Côte St. Antoine Rd., when the town of Notre Dame de Grâce was created in 1874. Dolan divided up the long, skinny farm and created a north-south street that he called Dolan Ave.

Since Côte St. Antoine was the only built-up street in the area, the first two lots to be sold by Mr. Dolan were 64-foot-wide lots fronting on Côte St. Antoine. In 1876, the lot at the corner of Dolan Ave. sold to Robert McCready, a boot and shoe manufacturer, while the lot to the west sold to Adeline Bray Barrats, wife of David Crawford, a high-class grocer and wine merchant.

About that time Montreal began to feel the effects of the Long Depression, which had started in 1873, so it appears nothing was built at least until 1885, when an architect named John P. Hill purchased the McCready lot (by auction, from McCready's estate) while Adeline Barrats-Crawford sold to a bookkeeper named William Greig. He eyed the lot next door and bought that immediately from Hill (for $43 more than he had paid for it four months earlier) and set about building a large detached house at the corner of Côte St. Antoine and Dolan Ave.

Warden King furnaces

William Greig settled into his house in 1886 as an employee of Rogers & King, which two years later became Warden King furnaces, whose product probably graced more Westmount houses than any other furnace and still chugged their way into the 1960s and 1970s, and, in one case at least, the 21st century.

By 1906, Greig's house had become 400 Côte St. Antoine, which he then sold to James Bailey, superintendent of Thomson Steamship Lines.

Within a year Bailey sheared off a 61-foot lot to the south of the house, and sold that along with the 64-foot lot on the west side of his property, to Jonathan Brown, a "gentleman," who lived at 1050 Dorchester St. downtown, for $7,748.40, or 50 cents per square foot.

Meanwhile, the huge mansion at 545 Roslyn Ave., just south of Côte St. Antoine, was purchased by Robert Thomas Hopper, an asbestos and mica executive. He then bought the 61-foot lot, reaching all the way to (what was by now) Lansdowne Ave., and set about building a large coach house at the rear of his Roslyn property.

He then sold the rest of the land to John Hand, who planned and constructed three houses, all 20 feet wide, on the Lansdowne frontage, attached on the south side by 542 Lansdowne, which (according to the city valuation roll) had been built in about 1899. By this time, most of the block had been developed on both sides, though the Greig mansion still stood at the corner of Côte St. Antoine Rd. (it has since been demolished).

John Hand, who by this time was building houses all over central-western Westmount, sold the three houses in late 1913, to Brenda Mary Hebden (544 Lansdowne), Cecil Charles Gardner (546 Lansdowne) and Charles Duncan (548 Lansdowne).

Insurance, machine supply & Woolworth's

By the time Brenda Hebden sold the Lansdowne property in 1916, she was married to J. E. Heare, an insurance agent. She sold the 544 Lansdowne house to Ernest Kingsland, who lived there for 35 years. For most of that time, he was a director of Williams & Wilson Co., a machinery supply company in downtown Montreal.

Finally, in about 1950, Kingsland retired (no doubt) and moved to Hudson, selling the house a year later to Clarence Hellyer, a manager at Woolworth's Store. By 1954 the occupant of 544 Lansdowne was A. E. Waugh, a teacher at Lorne Elementary School in Pointe St. Charles, but Hellyer did not sell until 1956, when it changed hands to Phyllis Lee, wife of Miller Ashworth Peterson, a supervisor at Canada Life Insurance Co. (by 1970, he had become a lawyer). She was a local author and worked in the public relations department of the Montreal Children's Hospital.

Linda Gold purchased the house in 1972, but the occupant was Dr. James E. Gibbons, director of cardiology at the Montreal Children's Hospital and associate professor of pediatrics at McGill University. In 1973, Gold sold the property to G. Austin Metze, who on the title deed called himself a "teacher" but who, in fact, was art director of the Canadian issue of

Time magazine, among other publications, and apparently still works in the graphic arts design business.

William G. King was a translator who purchased the property in 1977 and stayed there four years before selling to a company run by Gary Shotlander, a business and management consultant.

Air India Flight 182

One year later, in November 1982, the house was purchased by Vipin Bery and Neelam Nath. They were residents of the house when she boarded Air India Flight 182 in June 1985, which exploded near the Irish coast. Her husband sold the house a year after her tragic death. Vipin Bery is now a financial consultant in Toronto.

The $195,000 sale price to Richard Kraus and Ruth Bercovici grew to $278,000 by the time Robert Coppenrath and Jane Elizabeth Woolcombe, who have bought and sold many Westmount houses over the years, purchased the Lansdowne property and rented it out to Peter Sindell, anthropology professor at McGill University. He eventually (in 1993, in a falling real estate market) purchased the property in the name of his wife, Reeta Rislanti. A native of Finland who grew up in Winnipeg, she worked as an artist and fashion designer.

She sold the property in March 2006, to John Taylor for $525,000. He renovated it and sold it a year later to Martin Grant and Carolyn Thomson, the current owners, for $845,000. The house currently has a valuation of $1,007,400.

Westmount Then & Now: Westmount Park

Summertime is here, and Westmount Park is being enjoyed by all of us. This was the first park in our city when it opened in 1898 as Victoria Jubilee Park to commemorate the monarch's diamond jubilee.

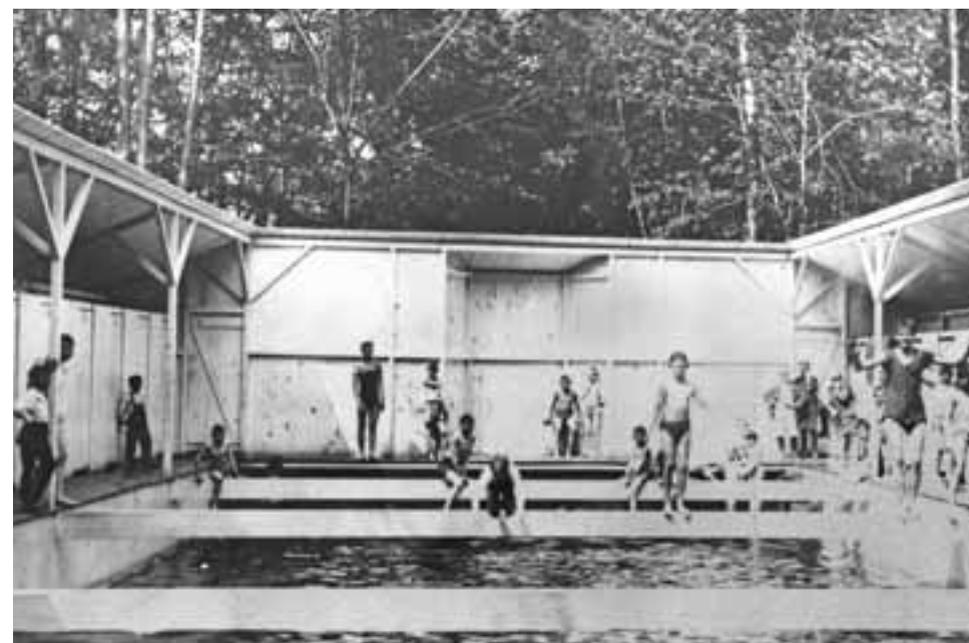

The Côte St. Antoine Improvement Committee had voted to acquire 16 acres south of recently-constructed Sherbrooke St. from a number of local landowners. The terrain was marshy and forested, with branches of the Glen stream wending through it. The park's natural state provided an oasis from the dirt, noise and germs of adjacent Montreal. After Westmount Public Library (1898) and Victoria Hall (1899) were constructed, the park became the hub of local cultural and recreational activities.

Over the years, the wildness was tamed, and the park's size was increased. Scenic twig bridges crossed the remaining ravines. There were sailboats in a new pond, concerts in the bandstand, cricket matches on the playing fields, and swimming in the small pool fed by the Glen stream. The first floral clock in Canada was installed in 1926. A flower conservatory with a palm house and a pond was built in 1927 next to the library.

In 1963, the park underwent a dramatic modernization, with paved pathways, raised borders, and a reconfigured water-course. In 1985, the roadway of de Maison-neuve was finally demolished, replaced by paths for bikes and walkers. The conservatory was joined to Victoria Hall by the Gallery at Victoria Hall in 1999. Most recently, the Westmount Recreation Centre (WRC) was constructed at the park's southwest corner, with an outdoor swimming pool and a retaining basin for runoff water. The landscaped roof of the WRC's underground facilities added more than an acre of green space to Westmount Park and provides marvelous views. A new dog run close by has proved popular with canines, owners, and passers-by, and the mallards have again taken up residence on the pond. Walking in this green oasis under an azure sky is a summer delight.

How appropriate that the Greek word "Ilios" means sun. The non-profit organization helps fund a summer camp for underprivileged and special-needs children, along with its mission of crisis intervention, community services and holiday-season financial help.

The Ilios gala was held at Le Windsor and I immediately thought of South Beach's Delano Hotel on entering the flowing white curtained hall with its alleyway of gleaming chandeliers.

Frank Scott turns 119

BY RALPH THOMPSON

On a hot, humid August 1 at 7 pm in Centre Greene more than twenty people gathered for an evening of poetry, marking the 119th anniversary of the birth of late Westmouter Frank Scott, a professor of constitutional law and socialist (1899-1985).

According to the Canadian Encyclopedia, "as a man of letters and social commitment, Scott profoundly influenced the evolution of modern Canada's artistic and political culture."

The poetry evening was organized by Jack Locke following his recent acquaintance with some of Scott's legal work as it related to the Quebec charter of rights and freedoms.

The poetry readings were preceded by a few words from filmmaker, translator and Governor General's award winner Don Winkler, whose 1982 film F.R. Scott: Rhyme and Reason, is freely available on the National Film Board web site. Winkler was working at the National Film Board more than 35 years ago when he decided to make six films about Canadian poets "at a time when certain poets of a senior generation were instrumental in introducing modernism into Canadian poetry and literature," he said.

The second film of the series was about Scott, who was also a Governor General's award winner and a translator.

Following Winkler's introduction, contributors read a Frank Scott poem of their choice followed by a second poem, in some cases written by themselves. Readers included William Thomas (Bill) Evans, Julien Feldman, Sandra Sjollema, Ehab Lotayef, former mayoral candidate Beryl

Wajzman, Helaine Klinger, Donald Winkler, Ryan Ruddick and Jack Locke. The
